

About the Authors

 <https://doi.org/10.1075/cilt.121.01abo>

Pages ix–xiv of

Functional Descriptions: Theory in practice

Edited by Ruqaiya Hasan †, Carmel Cloran and David Butt

[Current Issues in Linguistic Theory, 121]

1996. xxxvi, 381 pp.

© John Benjamins Publishing Company

This electronic file may not be altered in any way. For any reuse of this material written permission should be obtained from the publishers or through the Copyright Clearance Center (for USA: www.copyright.com).

For further information, please contact rights@benjamins.nl or consult our website at benjamins.com/rights

About the Authors

David BUTT is Senior Lecturer in Linguistics, and the Co-ordinator of the Master of Applied Linguistics program in the School of English, Linguistics and Media at Macquarie University. His research interests include grammar, stylistics, semantics, language as a theory of human experience, and relations between grammar and cognitive maps. He has published several learned papers, and amongst his larger publications is Using Functional Grammar: An Explorer's Guide (with Fahey, Spinks and Yallop, NCELTR, Macquarie University), which is an introduction to systemic functional grammar for the beginners and The Macquarie Way into Systemic Functional Grammar (Literacy Technology, 1992), intended for postgraduate Distance Learners.

Carmel CLORAN currently works as Research Associate with Ruqaiya Hasan and Colin Yallop in the School of English, Linguistics and Media (Macquarie University, N.S.W. 2109). Her research interests include context and language, language and socialisation, language and cognitive development, and lexis as delicate grammar. Her recent publications include 'Defining and relating text segments: Subject and Theme in discourse' (in On Subject and Theme: A Discourse Functional Perspective edited by Ruqaiya Hasan and Peter Fries, Benjamins, 1995) and Rhetorical Units and Decontextualisation: An Enquiry into Some Relations of Grammar, Meaning and Context, in the series Monographs in Systemic Linguistics, Department of English Studies, Nottingham University, 1994.

Kristin DAVIDSE currently teaches in the Linguistics Department at the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, (Belgium). She is one of the founder editors of the journal Functions of Language. Her research interests include systemic functional linguistic theory, grammar of English and the application of these to foreign and second language teaching. She has published 'Transitivity-ergativity: the Janus-headed grammar of actions and events' (in Advances in Systemic Linguistics: Recent Theory and Practice, edited by Davies and Ravelli. Pinter, 1992) and 'A semiotic approach to relational clauses' OPSL, 6. 1992.).

Liesbeth DEGAND is research assistant at the National Fund for Scientific Research (Belgium). Her research interests include systemic functional linguistic theory, the relation between semantics and grammar, multilingual and situation-based text generation. Her doctoral dissertation, currently under preparation, concerns research on a situation-based approach to causative expressions in Dutch. Contact: Faculté de psychologie et des sciences de l'éducation, place du Cardinal Mercier, 10. B-1348 Louvain-la-Neuve, Belgium.

Angela DOWNING has first degrees in modern languages and English from Oxford and Madrid, respectively. She completed her doctoral research at the Universidad Complutense, Madrid, where she has been Professor in English Language since 1986. Her current research interests are grammar and discourse of English and Spanish. She co-authored with Philip Lock A University Course in English Grammar, Prentice-Hall International, 1992, which won the first prize for grammar/dictionaries in The Duke of Edinburgh Award, 1993. Contact: Departamento de Filología Inglesa, Facultad de Filología, Universidad Complutense, 28040 Madrid, Spain.

M.A.K. HALLIDAY is Emeritus Professor of Linguistics (University of Sydney). Arguably the best known pupil of J.R. Firth, Halliday is the founder of systemic functional linguistics, and his research interests cover every area of language that impinges on human social existence. For his extensive list of publications, see Ruqaiya Hasan and J.R. Martin (eds) Language Development: Learning Language, Learning Culture, Ablex 1989. His most recent major publications are Writing Science: Literacy and Discursive Power (co-authored with J.R. Martin), Falmer, 1993; Language in a Changing World, Occ. Paper 13, ALAA, 1993; and Introduction to Functional Grammar, (2nd edition) Edward Arnold, 1994.

Ruqaiya HASAN is Professor Emerita of Linguistics at Macquarie University. Her research interests include stylistics, discourse analysis, lexis as delicate grammar, semantic networks, and socio-semantic variation; and she has published in all of these areas. Her most recent publications include 'Contexts for meaning' (in Language, Communication & Meaning, edited by J.E. Alatis, Georgetown University Press 1993), 'On social conditions for semiotic mediation: The genesis of mind in society' (in Knowledge and Pedagogy: The Sociology of Basil Bernstein, edited by A.R. Sadovnik, Ablex, 1994), On Subject and Theme: A Discourse Functional Perspective (co-edited with Peter Fries, Benjamins, 1995.), and Literacy in Society, co-edited with Geoffrey Williams, Longman. In press.).

Edward McDONALD's research interests include Chinese grammar and text analysis, application of systemic functional theory to the teaching of grammar, and the ideological status of Chinese language among the Chinese intellectuals and Western Sinologists. Currently he is engaged in doctoral research (School of English, Linguistics and Media, Macquarie University, N.S.W. 2109) on aspects of Chinese grammar. He has published 'Outline of a functional grammar of Chinese for teaching purposes', Language Sciences, 14.4, 1992; and 'On theme in Chinese: From clause to discourse' (with Fang Yan and Cheng Musheng) in On Subject and Theme: A Discourse Functional Perspective, edited by Ruqaiya Hasan and Peter H. Fries, Benjamins, 1995.

J.R. MARTIN is Associate Professor in the Department of Linguistics, University of Sydney, N.S.W. 2006. His research interests include systemic theory, functional grammar, discourse analysis, register, genre and ideology, focussing on English and Tagalog, with special reference to the trans-disciplinary fields of educational linguistics and social semiotics. Major publications: Factual Writing: Exploring and Challenging Social Reality, Deakin University Press 1985 (reissued: 1989 Oxford University Press); Writing to Mean: Teaching Genres across the Curriculum, (edited with Clare Painter), ALAA Occ. Papers 9, 1986; Language Development: Learning Language, Learning Culture, (edited with Ruqaiya Hasan), Ablex 1989; Language: A Resource for Meaning program, (co-authored with Frances Christie, Brian Gray, Mary Macken and Joan Rothery), Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 1990; English Text: System and Structure, Benjamins, 1992; Writing Science: Literacy and Discursive Power (co-authored with M.A.K. Halliday), Falmer Press, 1993.

Christian MATTHIESSEN is Associate Professor of Linguistics (School of English, Linguistics & Media, Macquarie University, N.S.W. 2109). For several years he was associated with the "Penman" text generation project and is well known as one of the architects of the NIGEL grammar for text generation. His research interests include systemic functional theory, grammar, lexis, and multilanguage generation. He is currently directing a research project in the latter area. Amongst his many publications are Text Generation and Systemic Functional Linguistics: Experiences from English & Japanese (with John Bateman, Pinter 1991); Lexicogrammatical Cartography (International Language Sciences Publishers, Tokyo. 1995) and Construing Experience through Meaning: A Language-based Approach to Cognition (with M.A.K. Halliday, de Gruyter, Berlin. In press.).

Christopher NESBITT is presently a lecturer in the Department of Language and Literacy at the University of Technology, Sydney. His current research interests include areas of English grammar, text analysis and computational linguistics.

David ROSE has worked for over a decade in Aboriginal adult education in central Australian communities, and in Sydney at University of Technology Sydney, University of Sydney and Macquarie University. This preoccupation with teaching English literacy to Aborigines has stimulated his interest in systemic functional linguistics. He is currently researching aspects of the grammar of Pitjantjatjara using a systemic functional approach. He has published Scientific Literacy (Literacy in Industry Research Project: Stage 1 (D. McInnes & H. Korner), published by Metropolitan East Disadvantaged Schools Program, N.S.W. 1992, and 'On becoming: the grammar of causality in Pitjantjatjara and English', Cultural Dynamics, 6.1-2, 1993, Guest Editor M.A.K. Halliday. David Rose is currently teaching in the Pitjantjatjara homelands in remote South Australia. Contact: Linguistics Department, University of Sydney, N.S.W. 2006. Australia.

Susanna SHORE currently works in the Department of Finnish at the University of Helsinki. Her major research interests are systemic functional theory and the grammar of Finnish. She has worked intensively in the latter area, with a Master's dissertation Suomen ns. passiivista (On the so-called Finnish passive), Finnish Department, University of Helsinki, and a doctoral dissertation Aspects of a Systemic Functional Grammar of Finnish, School of English, Linguistics & Media, Macquarie University, N.S.W. 2109. Contact: shore@cc.helsinki.fi

Gordon TUCKER is currently lecturer in applied linguistics at the University of Wales, College of Cardiff, U.K., a position to which he moved after several years of work as a senior research associate on the COMMUNAL natural language generation project in the same university under the direction of Robin P. Fawcett. His research concerns the lexicogrammatical development of the COMMUNAL systemic functional grammar, with special interest in lexis.

